MANAGER'S COMMENTS

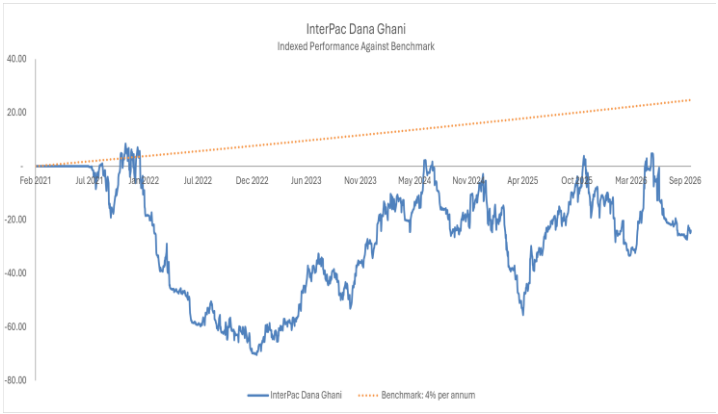

September was a month of rates, not earnings. The Fed raised rates for the first time since 2023, lifting the federal funds range by 25 basis points to 3.75%–4.00% on a 12-0 vote, and most officials pencilled in one more hike before year-end. Chair Warsh was blunt: inflation is too high and has been for too long. The data backed him. August CPI rose 0.4% on the month and 3.4% on the year, while payrolls rebounded by 162,000 after just 21,000 in July.

The bond market did the rest. With the Iran conflict in its seventh month and Brent holding above USD100, the 10-year Treasury yield climbed to 5.30% on September 30, its highest since 2002, and US mortgage rates reached 7.3%. A softer-than-expected core PCE reading late in the month cut the odds of an October hike but did not stop yields rising.

Equities split along familiar lines. The Dow fell more than 4% and the S&P 500 dipped less than 1% to close at 7,652, while the Nasdaq Composite gained close to 2%. Technology was the only S&P 500 sector to finish the month higher, as investors paid for earnings visibility and sold rate-sensitive and cyclical names. The ringgit weakened by about 1.4% against the US dollar, which added to ringgit returns on our US holdings.

We treated September's volatility as an entry point, putting cash to work in technology and broad US exposure while keeping a buffer against further rate shocks. Higher yields remain the main risk to valuations heading into the October 27–28 FOMC meeting and third-quarter earnings season. We will stay selective, favouring companies with earnings momentum and strong balance sheets.
